Anser and its team members have decades of experience managing higher education projects throughout the United States. Our clients' projects have included feasibility studies, design, construction and commissioning for new construction and renovations of campus facilities, infrastructure, student centers, laboratories, classroom buildings, makerspace, sports and recreation facilities, auditoriums, residence halls, dining halls and general academic buildings.

For over 20 years we have worked with more than 40 institutions on over 1,000 engagements with an aggregate value of $3 billion. Our services include organizational readiness and process and systems assessments through the program definition/planning phase, downstream to design, bid/award, and construction phase activities. Our higher education team understands how to work with clients in the development and execution of projects in the most cost effective way possible. We provide experienced staff matched to specific project needs. A large percentage of our firm's work comes from repeat clients, reflecting our commitment to developing strong relationships and excellent services.
